POLEX (Police Executive Development Training Program)

From 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Penn State's Justice and Safety Institute (JASI) has been providing its Police Executive Development Training Program (POLEX) on a national basis for several years, and the need for such training clearly remains. POLEX is designed to aid law enforcement supervisors and managers in their transition into positions of greater leadership and responsibility. This newly remodeled and flexible program highlights vital tools necessary to help make law enforcement professionals an integral and productive part of the management team.

JASI is pleased to partner with our co-sponsor to offer this innovative, interactive, and informative program to aid in the development of law enforcement professionals everywhere. This intensive course places an emphasis on the development of skills and abilities in all sectors of police management. All of our courses are instructed by current practitioners or recently retired executives. Key concepts and topics include, but are not limited to, the following:
